

MOJAVE DESERT NATIVE PLANTS

PEACH THORN

Lycium cooperi

The flowers are greenish white on this course shrub. The smooth reddish-brown bark turns black on older stems. During late summer it loses most of its leaves and goes into drought mode causing the blackish, thorn-armed stems to be very conspicuous. It is a member of the nightshade family.

